Stars and Stripes

Wave, wave, wave the flag,
As we march around.

Hold it high to show our pride,
It must not touch the ground.

Wave, wave, wave the flag,
Dear red, white and blue.
Stars and stripes forever bright,
America to you!

Designs In The Sky

Red, white and blue.

4th of July Ideas

FLAG CAKE Bake a cake (rectangle shape like 9x13). Frost with white frosting (or whip cream). Put sliced strawberries for the stripes, and use blueberries in the corner.

WIND SOCKS use red, white or blue construction paper and roll it length wise. Glue, tape or staple together. Add string as a handle to one end. Add red, white and blue streamers to the other end.

FLAGS Start with white construction paper. Children glue on red strips, to make red and white stripes. Then glue a blue square in the top left corner. For the stars you can use white tissue paper, crumpled up, or star stickers.

BELLS Use paper cups and let children decorate them. (have them add a "Crack", like the Liberty Bell) use string through the bottom of the cup, and tie on a small 'jingle bell'

ROCKET: make a cone shape, out of construction paper. Decorate with markers. Cut a narrow (approx. 2" long) slits on opposite sides of the wide open end. Use 18" of string, and with the point up, put the string through the slits, and pull sharply on the ends of relaxed string (rocket will fly into air).

FIREWORKS PAINTING Use a very large piece of paper (like bulletin board size) Let children drop small amounts of paint (different colors works good) Have the children swirl the paint out with a spoon, let them keep swirling from the center, in all directions around the drop of paint. Some of them may overlap, and that is fine, too. When it is finished it looks like fireworks bursting in the sky.

Sensory Table Place red, white or blue colored water in the sensory table with pitchers, measuring cups and other containers to allow the children to experience measurement.

Background Tell the children that Independence Day is celebrated on the fourth of July each year. It marks the day many years ago that the United States became independent, or when we decided that we would be our own country. Have the class set up a birthday party for America. Talk about what games children play at their own birthday parties and play some of those games. If possible play "Stars and Stripes Forever" and encourage children to play imaginary instruments along with the music.

Housekeeping Set up the housekeeping area with items you would take along on a picnic. Have the children pretend to make sandwiches and gather items to bring with. Then allow them to imagine what they'd do while they were picnicking.

Playdoh Fun Set out red, white and blue playdoh and let the children's imaginations run wild.

Art Table Using a black piece of construction paper, straws, and various colored paint allow the children to drop a small amount of paint onto paper and gently blow through the straw for fireworks in the sky effects.

Yankee Doodle Dandy Headbands Cut a band of red, white, or blue construction paper 4" wide. Cut length to fit around head; then fold over and staple together for a headband. Cut white paper into four 3" x 4" rectangles. Cut blue paper into four 1" x 2" rectangles; then glue onto upper left corner of the white paper for flags. Use a red marker to draw stripes on the flag, and white chalk to draw on the stars. Staple flags onto straws; then staple straws inside fold of headband.

Stars and Stripes Sponge Painting Red and blue tempera paint, Sponges cut into stars and long strips, white construction paper. Let the children make sponge prints on the white paper with the red and blue paint.

Red, White, and Blue Kabobs Supplies: Strawberries, Banana, blueberries, cocktail toothpicks or wooden skewers. Clean and slice the fruit. Have the children place a blueberry, strawberry, and a piece of banana on each toothpick. If using skewers, have children repeat pattern.
